

FURMAN

May 30, 2012

Dear Mr. Fosberg,

It was a pleasure to have you present your one man show, Incognito, to our students during Black Awareness Month 2012. Your presentation was the highlight of our black awareness month program. The content of your presentation was both inspirational and informative. The presentation definitely lived up to the advertisement as a “top theatrical event”.

Through your masterful presentation of your own journey for identity, you created a space for student to achieve a deeper understanding of race and identity. From the questions asked at the end of program, I felt the students received the information in a powerful and impactful way. I was particularly impressed with your natural ability to connect with the students. You left the students with a feasible blue print for effectively and thoughtfully engaging others on the difficult topic of race in the United States.

I thought that it was wonderful that you took the time to go to dinner with and students and I following the presentation. The dinner allowed us to get to know you on a more personal level. I appreciate your clarity and openness and advising the students about various strategies for creating understanding with peers and family.

In addition, your staff was a joy to work with in facilitating your travel logistics and contract negotiations. We hope to have the privilege to interact with you again in the future.

Sincerely,

Idella G. Glenn, Ph. D.,
